

ABSTRACT

A LED device including a first encapsulant that at least partially encapsulates a LED and resides within a light reflecting cavity, and a second encapsulant residing above the first encapsulant – wherein the first encapsulant is partially comprised of a first percentage of a first light reflecting substance. In addition, there is provided a method for constructing a LED device.